

What are Youth Justice Committees?

Youth Justice Committees provide an alternative way of dealing with non violent matters that are before the court.

These Committees bring together the young person, alleged to have committed a non-violent offence, the victim, and the young person's parent/guardian(s) with trained volunteer members of the community. In this way, the concerns of the victim are addressed so that the harm caused can be repaired in a way that meets the victim's, community's and offenders needs.

The young person must accept responsibility for their actions and complete sanctions assigned by the Youth Justice Committee.

The Youth Justice Committee works closely with Probation Services, Crown Attorneys, Police, Legal Aid Ontario and community organizations.

How does the Newmarket Youth Justice Committee work?

The young person and parent/guardian meets with a Probation Officer at court, who considers eligibility for the program. If referred to the program, the young person and parent/guardian will be given an appointment time to meet with the Youth Justice Committee members. This consists of a panel of trained volunteers, the victim, the offender and the parent/guardian(s).

The victim of the offence is contacted. The Youth Justice Committee process is explained and the victim is invited to attend a scheduled hearing. Participation may also take the form of a victim impact statement or letter.

After hearing from all parties, the Youth Justice Committee, with input from the victim, will determine sanctions to be completed by the young person to repair the harm that has been done.

Possible Sanctions?

- Apology (verbal/written)
- Community Service/Personal Service to the victim
- Compensation/Restitution to the victim
- Essay
- Donation to charity
- Attendance at workshops (for example Stop Shoplifting or Victim Impact Awareness)
- Poster/Journal
